Digital Delivery Manager

National - See Advert - Digital Delivery (NHS Blood and Transplant (NHSBT))

Salary: £40,057 to £45,839 pa + HCAS where applicable Working Pattern: Full time Job Type: Fixed term

Reference: 918-IM9614R Closing Date: 05 Jul 2022

This is an Internal Vacancy - applications from candidates outside of NHSBT will NOT be considered

This is a national vacancy, the successful candidate may be based at any of our main centres in the UK, final location to be agreed at interview.

NHS Blood and Transplant (NHSBT) is an integral part of the NHS. Operating a network of centres across England and North Wales, we collect around 2 million units of blood and tissues a year, converting them into safe and effective blood components, blood and tissue products for use in the treatment of patients.

In the last two years the Donor Experience Product Centre has built and deployed brand new mobile and web applications to make it easier for blood donors to book and manage their appointments. And we're only just getting started,

By implementing genuinely agile ways of working, alongside new technology and using automation wherever possible we now have the foundations in place to make regular iterative changes that will add real value to our users and the organisation by contributing to the delivery of strategic objectives.

As a Delivery Manager you will be helping to facilitate these changes, coordinating and contributing to every aspect of the delivery lifecycle from discovery and prioritisation, through testing, development, deployment and monitoring.

You will use the latest agile tools and methods and focus on translating complex user needs to tangible digital deliverables. Planning, defining and delivering large-scale digital projects, you'll get the best from our multidisciplinary, collaborative teams.

You will be a champion of agile working and contribute to a culture of continuous improvement, both within digital and beyond.

This is a role that's as much about people as process. As well as having experience of delivering digital projects using agile methodologies or the Government Digital Service (GDS) framework, you'll be adept at leading and motivating project teams. You'll also know how to engage stakeholders and manage their expectations, and you'll be analytical, well organised and capable of thinking both strategically and tactically.

If you are passionate about digital products, adding value, continuous improvement and personal development, and managing a varied workload to support and enable the team to deliver, then this is an excellent opportunity to join a progressively thinking team that has recently been shortlisted in the NHSBT Together Awards for 'Growing and Diversifying our Donor Base Award'
